

Regarding recent revision of text-books- laid

SHRI E. T. MOHAMMED BASHEER (MALAPPURAM): It is quite unfortunate that recent revision of Indian textbook have sparked debate on the secular nature of country's education system under this regime. Omission of Mughal history, removing the chapters discussing democracy, secularism and citizenship from the textbook of political science is another example. It goes without saying that the politicisation of the education can polarize the society. Contribution of different community should be an integrated part of the history text books in which there is an omission about the role of Muslims. In brief the recent textbook revision have raised significant concerns about the potential shift away from India's secular education framework, highlighting the complex interplay between education, politics and national identity.
