

Regarding alleged error in publication of map of India by NITI Aayog showing Bihar as West Bengal-Laid

SHRIMATI PRATIMA MONDAL (JAYNAGAR): A grave error has been identified in an official NITI Aayog publication where Bihar has been erroneously marked as West Bengal on the map of India. This oversight undermines the identity and constitutional status of West Bengal and reflects a concerning lapse in institutional diligence. It is an affront to the identity, dignity of the State. It reflects a shocking lack of serious questions about the reliability of official publications. My request to the government is to immediately issue a formal correction and public apology for the erroneous map published by NITI Aayog and to fix accountability for this grave oversight. I also urge the government to ensure strict vetting mechanisms to prevent such disrespectful error in future official publications.
