title: Need for a final draft with regard to climate change that will take into account the concerns of developing countries and small island states.

PROF. SAUGATA ROY (DUM DUM): The Paris Summit on climate change has moved into a final round to provide a clean text for consideration. The Indian Environment, Forest and Climate Change Minister has had a separate talk with US secretary of State to sort out the contentious issues. India has been demanding that developing countries should be differentiated explicitly from developed countries. India wants the sanctity of voluntary national revival pledges to reduce carbon emission called INDCs. India's IPR import bill highlights the importance of technology transfer to fight climate change.

Ultimately we want a final draft that will take into the account concern of developing countries and small island States.
