Joint Consultative Machinery and Compulsory Arbitration) for the following reasons:-

- (i) The duties and recruitment qualifications of the post of Computer (now compiler) in the Office of Registrar General, India (RGI) are not comparable with those of the post of Investigator of National Sample Survey Organization (NSSO) with whom parity is mainly being sought;
- (ii) Upgradation of the pay scale of Computers (now compiler) in the Office of Registrar General, India (RGI) may lead to similar demands from the UDCs in the Central Government and other common categories posts, which would have huge financial implications; and
- (iii) The matter has already been examined by a number of Central Pay Commissions, which are expert bodies and consider all the posts across the Government in a holistic manner. The proposal in respect of the Office of the RGI involves one time expenditure of nearly `36.14 crores and recurring expenditure of nearly `2.93 crores per annum. Besides, the Award, if accepted, will have wider financial and administrative implications, as similar demands would be raised by a large number of other similarly placed staff in the Government, which will not be in the interest of national economy and social justice."
