

[Shri Samar Guba]

the airlines in different countries provide certain extra facilities to their nationals and India did not challenge that. So, if the Government of India provides some extra facilities to its nationals, why should that question be raised ?

The hon. minister referred to certain undercutting of the fare and some rebate being given under the table. Which are the countries which do undercutting of the fares under the table ? I also want to know whether the Government has taken into consideration all the eventualities and what steps they are going to take in expanding our own airlines and providing facilities to the Indian citizens to fly by our own planes if those foreign airlines, who are threatening India, stop calling at Indian airports ?

DR. KARAN SINGH : As I said in my answer, at least as far as we know, there is really no question of any retaliation and no such idea has been put to us by any of the airlines. I entirely agree with the hon. Member that there should be no justification whatsoever for taking any such step. In fact, by making this relaxation a much broader spectrum of Indians can now travel abroad and this can be taken advantage of by all airlines, including Air India. I therefore feel that foreign airlines should welcome this act because we have now given them a much larger potential.

As I stated earlier, I do not think that IATA is involved in this. IATA is involved only when we consider the fares. This has nothing to do with the air fares. This only says how much of his own money a person can take in foreign exchange. I do not see how IATA came into the picture.

As far as as under-the-table deals are concerned, unfortunately the airlines who indulge in this do not advertise that they do so. It is difficult for me to pin them down. I hope the hon. Member will bear with me that I do not think it would be correct for me to mention any names because, after all, we want to work in co-operation. Even if we bring it to the notice of any airlines, they will say : we have not done it, some agents have done it. So, I do not think any names should be mentioned, because we want to maintain good relations with all the other airlines that are operating here.
